

Southeast Region

Complementing the beautiful coastline of the South Shore, Cape Cod, and South Coast of southeastern Massachusetts is the rich tradition of precision manufacturing in the region. The century-old jewelry industry spurred the modern growth of high-tech manufacturing – especially medical devices.

Served by I-95, I-495, and I-195, the region is also connected to Boston by three MBTA commuter rail lines, Amtrak service from Boston to Providence, New York, and beyond. Travel time from any part of the region to Boston-Cambridge is generally from 20 minutes to one hour. The area is also rich in space to grow, with a large number of industrial and research parks with excellent infrastructure.
